THE VICTORY IN MISSISSIPPI.

Supposing that the measures of Radicalism were so well taken as to insure the success of Scalawagism and the adoption of the counterfeit Constitution, that was to be voted on by part of the people and all the negroes, we were taken by surprise when the thing was reported to be defeated by a large majority. We supposed, indeed, that in consequence of the great number of negro voters in comparison to those of the white race, there would be no necessity to resort to frands in order to obtain a majority for the Constitution; and that, in the absence of temptation, Radicalism might refrain SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE from rascality.

When we saw the printed returns from a large number of the countles, we still thought there must be some mistake about the matter, and rather doubted whether we were not dreaming. There this letter, I write you on board the is no longer any doubt of the defeat of famous "double-deck" steamer America, the Constitution, by how large a majority of the regular line between Louisville we cannot say, -the Mississippi jour- and Cincinnati.
